The Art of Haiku with Angela Leuck

In the first workshop, award-winning poet Angela Leuck will give a brief introduction to writing haiku—the three-line Japanese-inspired nature poem that’s easy to learn and fun for all ages. Then, in the second workshop, you will use one of your poems to create a haiku artwork or “Haiga.” Whether you like to draw, paint, take photographs or use found objects from the natural world, you can let your creativity run wild as you combine one of your haiku with your favourite art form. Ten of the best “Haiga” will be showcased in the first issue of Suncatcher, a new online Haiku Journal for Kids and Teens.

Learn how to make mini-zines from two sheets of paper (and some thread). A Zine, pronounced "zeen" (just like the end of the word magazine), is a homemade publication. Making a zine is all about self-expression and creativity, with no rules but those you make up for yourself! This 2-part workshop with poet Rachel McCrum and artist Lisa Kimberly Glickman will teach you how to write your own story, in a beautiful DIY format ready for sharing everywhere!

Lisa Kimberly Glickman will share her Luminary Lantern Magic in the shape of wondrous water lilies and other mesmerizing designs. Is there anything more magical than a beautiful starry night? No art experience necessary.

In addition, participate in this year's edition of the city of Sherbrooke's whimsical Rivières de Lumières/Rivers of Light by placing a lantern outside your home on the 25th and 26th of September on the first weekend of the Journées de la Culture. Simple Puppets and Story Making with Maggie Winston

As artists and educators adapt to online, the art of puppetry hasn't lost its magic! In fact, a puppet works very well in the frame of a computer, ipad, or cell phone. In this workshop you will learn how to make simple puppets and backgrounds. Using 'quick and dirty' crafting techniques, each participant will make their own original puppet, which will then become part of a story we create and perform together as a group. We will improvise, play and collaborate to find interesting ways to manipulate our newly born puppet characters on screen, telling a story from beginning to end.

Age 4+ Materials: Paper, scissors, sticks (pencils, chopsticks, skewers, natural sticks (small branches), popsicle sticks, dowels- pick one, it's up to you), markers, pencils crayons, or crayons, tape (scotch or masking), cardboard (optional), dress-up costumes (optional)

Wake-up, Warm-up and Other Moving Adventures with Eryn Dace Trudell

This two-part workshop aims to get energy and creativity focused and flowing with ideas that evolve from sensing and responding to movement. Beginning with sounds and words in motion, you will each land upon an image, where rhythm, space and form, await to be born. The physical explorations will introduce compositional elements of dancemaking/choreography. While making dances, the students' kinesthetic perception and expression will be enhanced intuitively and spontaneously. No experience in dance required.

Age 4+ Materials: Enough space to be able to spread your arms out and roll on the floor. Dress comfortably in loose fitting clothing. Bare or socked feet recommended.

Message in a Bottle with Louise Campbell, Jessica Houston & Guillaume Jabbour

Guided by experienced visual, sound and music artists and arts educators, members of a household or classroom share a snapshot of their surroundings by completing the statements, "I see, I hear". The result is a video posted on the ELAN youtube channel that is pieced together by the ELAN ArtEd team and incorporates drawings, photos, and audio recordings. Participants can also contribute musically by playing along to a sample. As an added special project, Louise Campbell and Guillaume Jabbour invite musicians to contribute to the creation of the ELAN ArtEd Virtual Workshop Theme Song by recording a part that is added to a sample composed by the two sound and music artists.
